

AAMI is YOUR Association...

Looking for a way to get more involved in AAMI? Here are 10 different options that you might consider.

1

Have a voice in standards development!

There are several ways to get involved—propose a new work item, join a technical committee, submit comments on public review drafts, and attend open meetings of AAMI committees and working groups. For more info, e-mail standards@aami.org.

Join a committee.

Shape the future direction of your profession. Participate in committees that oversee publications, the certification exam and process, the Annual Conference, or technology management issues. For more info, e-mail membership@aami.org.

Become an author.

Your work will reach thousands of your peers. Plus, you will be eligible for an annual award and receive certification renewal credit. For more info, e-mail publications@aami.org.

Get certified.

AAMI offers resources for candidates pursuing certification as a biomedical equipment technician, or laboratory or radiology equipment specialist. For more info, e-mail certifications@aami.org.

Attend AAMI's Annual Conference & Expo.

This is a perfect opportunity to learn—through high-quality educational presentations, by viewing the newest medical technology on the market, and networking with your peers. For more info, visit www.aami.org/ac.

6 Train with industry and regulatory professionals.

6

Participate and learn through AAMI's comprehensive and interactive training programs, which bring together regulatory and quality systems professionals. For more info, visit www.aami.org/meetings.

7 Join an AAMI discussion group.

7

Network with your peers and get your questions answered through AAMI's online listservs focusing on Joint Commission issues, Quality Systems, educators' topics, biomed societies, and benchmarking. For more info, visit www.aami.org/tmconnect/discussiongroups.html.

8 Get social.

8

Find the most up-to-date news by joining AAMI on Facebook, LinkedIn, and Twitter. It's a great way to stay connected and network with your peers. For more info, visit www.aami.org and click on the social media icons.

9 Promote your company.

9

AAMI offers several different marketing opportunities for companies and consultants to promote themselves online or in print, depending on your needs. For more info, e-mail jrichardson@admarketinggroup.com.

10 Share your resources.

Got a sample policy, brochure, or other document that others could benefit from? Share them with your colleagues and find the documents that you may want at AAMI's website. For more info, visit <http://www.aami.org/tmconnect>.
