Welcome

As you know, medical technology is changing rapidly. In addition to servicing equipment, medical technology professionals now have responsibilities in areas such as technology management, information technology, networked medical instrumentation, servicing imaging technologies, and interfacing with caregivers, just to name a few. Ever-changing job responsibilities are the norm.

The Career Task Force of AAMI's Technology Management Council has updated this CD to provide you with more than 150 articles and other resources. This comprehensive compilation covers a wide range of career issues — from guidance on how to develop IT skills and specialties, to preparing for career transitions, and a move into management.

Find what you need in the topic areas on the left, or use the search function to search by key words or authors. I hope that you find these resources very helpful in your professional growth.
